

Content Management System

One of the primary requirements for the redesign of the Navigata Communications corporate Web site was the implementation of a content management system.

The system I designed has many of the features of high-end CMS tools, including multiple languages, WYSIWYG administrative interface, document management, ability to set content publish and expiry dates, and ability to create relations between different content.

The front-end of the Web site features a search engine capable of indexing HTML and PDF documents, as well as on-the-fly product lists, site map, job opportunities, etc.

